

Knowing how complex and emotional the topic of taxes is for us all, I have one simple question to ask of our elected leadership.

No matter what we call them, or how we justify them, where will these never-ending tax increases lead in the long term?

Why are there not more plans to actively reduce the spending of tax dollars in less critical areas? This would allow us to fund for the more important needs without adding to the already great financial burden of the taxpayers.

Thank-you for considering my point of view.
